Principal's Corner

We are well into the final month of this school year and we are approaching our summer break. I am quite proud of all the accomplishments of our students this school year as we adapted to all the changes and new rules we placed on our students. Students and teachers have worked hard to prepare for end of year standardized exams. We received good scores on the WYTOPP and ACT this year.

Track is in full swing and we have already had some school records broken by students at the high school and middle school levels. Way to go student athletes for your hard work and dedication. It is fun having the opportunity to see you compete.

Students, as we prepare for summer break, remember to keep up on your reading skills and try to retain as much knowledge as possible moving forward. Parents, studies have shown that increased parental involvement results in increased student achievement. We know that most parents are already quite involved in the student's school life and any additional time shows in your student's growth.

Thanks for your support in making our school and community a great place to be. If you have any questions or comments, please call or email us at the school and together we will make this a great end to the school year.

With Pioneer Pride,
Levi Collins

Parent Note

Reflect on the school year and celebrate your child's success

As the school year winds down, it's a great time to help your child look back, look forward, give thanks and celebrate. Here's how:

Talk to your child's teacher. Ask about your child's strengths and weaknesses. How has he improved? Where does he need more work? Ask what you can do to help your child over the summer.

Talk to your child about the school year. Ask what he thinks went well. Talk about what challenged him most. Help him figure out what changes he should make for the upcoming school year.

Review your child's successes. Look over schoolwork you've saved during the year. Point out how much your child has learned—how many new words, for example. Or how he can add and divide. Or how his writing has improved.

Help your child set learning goals for the summer. How much time will he spend reading? What math concepts would he like to master? Guide him, based on the suggestions from his teacher.

Encourage your child to thank people who have made the year work—the teacher, school nurse, librarian, food service worker, etc. This will help him appreciate how many people have helped him.

Celebrate the year's accomplishments with a special activity. It doesn't have to be elaborate or cost anything. Just make plans to enjoy one-on-one time with your child.

Think about your time in middle school

Do you remember being 13 and going through difficult times? You might have felt clumsy, nervous, misunderstood or unpopular. It's helpful for you to talk about those experiences with your child.

Many college professors ask students in education classes to do something similar. They ask teachers-in-training to write about how they felt as middle school students.

Why bring up these old feelings? Reliving them helps soon-to-be teachers see into the hearts and minds of the students they will be teaching. They agree that this helps them find common ground with middle schoolers.

This strategy can work for parents, too. The next time your child seems upset, share a story from your middle school years. Talk about how you felt and how you coped, or what you wish you had done. Ask what your child plans to do.

Remember: Middle schoolers are more willing to open up when they think parents can relate to what they are saying.

Help your teen deal with end-of-school-year stress

There is a test tomorrow and a paper due next week. Another teacher just assigned a huge group project and your teen also has a summer job interview this weekend.

The end of a school year is a time when many high school students feel overwhelmed by their workloads. And, since stressed students are rarely at their best, they sometimes perform below their capabilities.

To support your teenager during stressful times:

Be a good listener. Sometimes, just giving your teen a chance to let off steam can be helpful. Don't try to "fix" problems. Just let your teen talk—and really listen.

Ask questions to help your teen figure out ways to work through the problem. Would creating a study schedule be helpful? Can the interview be rescheduled? Teens are more likely to embrace solutions when they come up with them.

Encourage sleep. Sleep is essential in order for teens to perform at their best. It is also a mood stabilizer. A lack of sleep only heightens the effects of stress.

Suggest stress relievers. Taking a few deep breaths before an exam or a job interview can make your teen feel more in control. A brief walk outside can help with focus. Eating a healthy snack supplies energy to keep going. But encourage your teen to avoid high-caffeine energy drinks, as too much caffeine can lead to agitation and insomnia.

Kindergarten Round Up

We are planning a Kindergarten Roundup on Tuesday, May 3rd. If your child is of kindergarten age, (will be five years old by August 1st, 2022), we would like to have him/her come to school to meet the teacher, Mrs. Schwarz and get acquainted.

The hours of the Roundup will be 7:58 a.m. to 11:50 a.m. Please call the school and let us know if your child will be attending. Those students living in the country are encouraged to ride the bus to school that morning. However, please call the school so that he/she will know that you have a child who will be riding.

We would like to meet with all parents in the kindergarten room at 11:30 a.m. to discuss kindergarten readiness. This meeting will last about twenty minutes.

If you know of someone in our district who did not get a letter but has a child entering kindergarten, please ask them to call the school. We would like to have all students entering kindergarten next fall attend the Roundup.

Please make sure you have completed a registration form and bring it along with a copy of your child's birth certificate and immunization record when you come to pick up your child. If your child is currently attending Pre-school here, we already have their registration paperwork.

CSO

Have a wonderful and safe summer! Thank you to all for your continued support of Ten Sleep CSO!

Library-After the Bell

The After the Bell program at the Ten Sleep Library is held Mondays, Tuesdays and Thursdays during the school year. Our purpose is to help Ten Sleep families with after school care, so parents can work. We provide a safe environment for them to be in and provide after school supervision. Kids are eligible for this program from Kindergarten to 5th grade. We try to do fun and exciting things with the kids to entertain them during the program. We introduce them to new and exciting programs to broaden their minds. It is a fun way to learn new things.

Recently, After the Bell purchased a Garden Tower Project planter. Its purpose is multi-leveled. Our After the Bell students will learn of construction, growing food, harvest, and vermicomposting.

The kids were challenged with reading the assembly instructions and coordinating the build. While the actual build was simple on an adult level, with no experience, kids had to figure out how a socket wrench works!

Once our garden tower was built, the kids learned about plants, how to read and decipher a seed packet, what we wanted to grow, and plant planning of the tower. The tower was filled with dirt and worms, and seeds were planted and labeled. It took two meetings to accomplish everything. A week later, and we have radishes and lettuce growing! Our plants are all edible, including nasturtiums, so we will harvest throughout the coming months and share during our summer reading program.

We believe this will give everyone a chance to learn about gardening, self-sufficiency, plant cycles, composting, and the satisfaction of accomplishment.

Participants in the grow tower project are Evan Rice, Lacey Greet, Tessa Lyman, Jaxon Greet, Lorelei Greet, Quinlan Greet, Emmi Beckwith, Aiden Bader, Siri Smith, and Olive Truman.

If you would like to view our short video of this project please view it on the Ten Sleep Library Facebook page. Like our page! After the Bell programming is grant funded by "TANF", Temporary Assistance for Needy Families Community Partnership.

Plan Safety into Summer Fun!

Summer break is almost here, which means more time for outside activities. Here are just a few tips to keep your summer fun and safe!

Stay hydrated! Make sure you and your children are getting enough to drink. Avoid beverages with caffeine and high sugar contents.

Use sunscreen! Choose sunscreen that protects from both UVA and UVB rays and has an SPF of 30 or higher.

Wear a helmet! Wear a helmet when riding bikes. According to SAFE KIDS, wearing a helmet can reduce the risk of head injury by as much as 85%.

I hope you have a safe and fun summer break! Thank you for another great year!

The Changing of the Weather

Spring time is upon us and that means new birth. It also appears to be a metaphor in the world of education. New beginnings and "birth" is on the horizon and with that comes excitement and also a little trepidation. We are hopeful and extremely excited for our future at Washakie School District #2. In a small school I have had the amazing opportunity lately to serve on committees that involve hiring staff. This is important work that I personally take serious. As the process unfolded, I learned a lot. I learned about the needs of our building and I also took note on what it might take moving forward to embrace the change and also a "note to self" moment on what I need to hold myself accountable to. And I would like to share some thoughts with you.

For our school to continue to be successful, it is imperative that we respect and follow the chain of command. It was eye opening to me recently that often we have become "comfortable" and informal. Sitting on interview committees with a range of members, made me aware that others have similar thoughts. It's easy to call our neighbor, i.e. the board member, and voice our concerns. And it's acceptable because, in our mind, they are an elected official. They should listen to us. They too, want to be respectful of the voice of the people and you may find it quite common that they do listen and hear you out. This is a tough position to put someone in no matter the relationship/role. I love the small community and the flexibility and the comfortable, family feel. However, I would caution us all that the chain of command is a thing, not just in schools. Often, I too, get frustrated hearing "follow the chain of command"..... But far more things suffer when it's not followed than when it is followed. Putting a board member in the position such as that, is difficult, and I understand the logic and the will to want to do that. I, too, have found myself wanting to 'call the neighbor'. For the success of the school and the success of others who hold the position, consider all aspects of the situation. Is your choice fair? Is it equal? Are you speaking with your heart (emotional)? Or are you speaking with your head (logic and thoughts)? Where are we coming from? Judgement? We all want what is truly best. But the process we go about it is just as important as the content.

For our school community to move forward positively, we (the school and staff associated with the school) need positive vibes, support, and grace during this time. The staff here is in the trenches daily, working with students to the best of our ability. Spring time is rough, across the country in any school you will see similarities. Recently, the interviewees echoed the same sentiment. All schools are struggling right now with their own set of worries, among national concerns. The community support and positive energy is imperative at this grand juncture in our school progression. Recently, rumors get spread, people talk, and feelings get hurt. No one is immune to either side of this. The school is the heart of our community. When school is struggling, everyone seems to feel it. This has been another realization of mine this semester. If we want our "heart" to be healthy, we need to take care of it at all costs. That may mean taking a step back, and assessing, staying calm, or gathering more information before making split, off hand comments. And if our school is the heart, and your child goes to this school, that precious individual carries the heart- they are "the heart". At the school, we want to take care of that child like it's the last human on earth. Every child is such a gift. For us at school to do our job, we need positive energy, support, and consideration. I realized recently that educators do not go in to education because "it's their fall back plan". I've always known this and found value in it, I just really find it important right now, to highlight this. Educators are different humans. Everyone, no matter their job, has had a teacher at some point in their life; good, bad, or otherwise. An educators heart just beats differently; their genetic makeup is just different.

Educators go into this profession, not for the fame, glory, or puke. We go in to this profession because it's our calling; it's our service duty to serve others. Teachers have to do and BE so many things all at the same time. Picture that meme about teachers being a nurse, a mom, a mediator, a cook, a thermometer, a recess specialist, a shoe tying magician, a book critic, a math wizard, etc.... All at the same time! Teachers work with children all over the board. And it is magic that somehow, all students progress- hopefully because progress is one of the many goals.... Teachers are magical and they get puked on, beaten up, torn to shreds personally, have to balance "life" and personal dealings, while developing new curriculum for the latest and greatest EVBXYZ assessment, debating recess disagreements, correcting late and missing work, updating grades, negotiating schedules, finding time to make the phone call home during the 3 minute passing period, all while, potentially holding back tears.....I mean, seriously, it's juggling at it's finest. I could go on and on, but for the sake of space for this article, I think you get the point. These past few years, educators have been in the trenches, dealing with their own life circumstances, and really never get a break from public ridicule. Recently, (I've just noticed I use that word a lot in this article because I'm passionate about my work and most current issues school is facing....) I have cried in a large meeting in front of my peers. I try really hard to be an emotional rock and I have had to practice, in my line of work, to not have large emotional reactions which is hard to do when I feel all the feels of those around me. But I admit it. I have shed tears and it's OK to cry. I have- because this school is important to me and the people here are important to me. The heart has been suffering and it needs your protection. Please handle it with care. In the storm of change, please be kind and give grace to those heart holding, magicians we call educators.
